Biography

Tony Lundervold is a western singer songwriter from Silverton, Oregon. He has put all of the dedication and determination he's learned from years of rodeo into his music. Tony competed as a saddle bronc rider in the NPRA for 13 years and won the 2009 Northwest Professional Rodeo Association Saddle Bronc Riding title. Now an entertainer, his debut album, "From the Ranch to the Rodeo" has had significant airplay from radio stations all across the world since its release and has received many notable reviews. In 2015 "From the Ranch to the Rodeo" was nominated as a top 5 Academy of Western Artists, Western Album of the Year. In June of 2019, Tony released his EP, "Doin' Just Fine," which has also received a great amount of support from fans and radio stations alike. From covers by Chris LeDoux and Merle Haggard to original music he's written about his life experiences as a rodeo competitor, a family man, and a lifelong cowboy, Tony entertains fans from all walks of life. Whether playing at a large venue with his band or in a more intimate setting as a solo artist, Tony is able to draw-in the audience with his warm vocals, personal interaction, and professionalism.
